Romulus has 'new direction'

By JIM CARRAVALLAH
Of The Roman Staff

As with every "odd year" since 1971, the year of 1975 brought a "new direction" to Romulus city government.

The past year was the third change in the leadership at Romulus City Hall since the city was incorporated in 1971, with former Councilman James C. Stewart defeating incumbent mayor Terry L. Troutt in the Nov. 4 general election.

With Stewart's election came a "new look" on the City Council with three of seven council members being replaced.

The tax case heated up the city...

Newly elected to council were Gervazio (Jerry) Canejo, the new mayor pro tem; Robert Martin, the new council president pro tem; and Jimmie C. Raspberry, a former councilman who was defeated for office in 1973.

They join 4-year veterans Fred Junior Block and William M.

Oakley, and 2-year incumbents Joan A. Lee and Beverly McAnally to round out the council team.

Incumbent Clerk Leonard Folmar and incumbent treasurer John B. Lewkowicz were returned to office, with Folmar running unopposed, and Lewkowicz running up the biggest winning margin of any elected official in the general election.

The hotly-contested mayoral election got off to a tight start with Troutt barely edging Stewart for the top spot in the primary and reached a climax two days before the final voting when Stewart's trailer burned.

Although Stewart and his supporters claimed the trailer fire was a last minute "dirty trick" by Troutt supporters, investigators from the Wayne County Sheriff's Road Patrol maintain it was a Halloween "prank," probably committed by youths from Romulus High School.

Despite a 14-vote victory in the general election, Stewart is not assured totally of the mayor's post for the next two years, because of possible litigation which could surround the vote tally.

Since he's taken office following a Wayne County Circuit Court Judge's ruling in his behalf in late November, Stewart has "cleaned out" City Hall of what he terms hardline Troutt supporters and "cronies" by firing eight officials and planning on firing more after the first of the year.

Among the replacements Stewart hired for vacated positions were a major campaign donor and the attorney who handled a tax case in his behalf.

The tax case heated up the city in mid-summer when Troutt maintained that Stewart failed to pay taxes on a commercial building he owned since permits were taken out for its construction in 1971, and it was completed in 1973.

Stewart had maintained he would pay the taxes if he could be billed legally for them, but said he would not pay them if it was the Troutt administration's mistake.

Lewkowicz has maintained that Stewart owes taxes for the past two years, according to state law.

Two activities started by Troutt before the election now are in a state of flux with the change in government.

City officials are to re-examine their stand on Detroit Metropolitan Airport and its expansion by the Wayne County Road Commission.

Troutt and the City Council had taken a "hard line" stand on the expansion, fighting it in the federal courts. But the best the city has accomplished to date was a temporary delay in construction of a new runway. Officials met just last week to "buy time" for a final decision on funding an appeal of the ruling by the Federal District Court to the Federal Court of Appeals.

Stewart has recommended against the appeal.

Likewise, a plan for constructing a new district court building for the 34th District, which includes Romulus, Belleville, and the townships of Van Buren, Sumpter and Huron, may change with the change in leadership. Tentative plans had been made to finance construction of a new building in Van Buren Township with participation from each of the five communities, but city officials have voiced the opinion a new facility should be constructed in the Civic Center complex.

The best "good news" in the city was the expansion of the General Motors Corp. Detroit Diesel Allison Division assembly plant in the city. The $100 million expansion will mean thousands of jobs and an increased return on taxes for the community.

The "bad news" for the city has been the failure to date to construct a new commercial center. However, Stewart has promised to pick up the ball where Troutt left it in an effort to find developers for a new center.

Twice plans were made to construct a shopping center on Wayne Road north of the I-94 freeway, but each time they were scrapped for lack of financing.

The first plans included discussion with local developer Melvin Morgan to construct a center on the west side of the road, but financial problems forced a cancellation of that plan.

Then local entrepreneur Ronald Makino made a proposal to build a center on the Shady Hollow Golf Course, but city restrictions and a lack of financing killed that plan.

Stewart said he has been talking with local developers to resurrect a shopping center plan and hopes to have details finalized in the relatively near future.

Home at last

Romulus Mayor James C. Stewart, after his ten-month absence, settles nicely into his desk in the Romulus City Hall mayor's office. With each day, the mayor puts more of his own personal touches into the Romulus City Hall staff organization. Next on his list of "things to do" after a Christmas break will be reorganizing the city budget to better reflect his plans for the city's progress. — The Romulus Roman photo.

Decision due on suit

By JIM CARRAVALLAH
Of The Roman Staff

City and school officials have "bought time" in an attempt to make final a decision on fighting further for a halt to construction of a new runway in Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Following a lengthy Dec. 22 meeting with Jerrold Fadern, a Los Angeles attorney who handled the original case against expansion of the airport by the Wayne County Road Commission (WCRC) the Romulus Board of Education offered to put up a $250 share of the $350 filing fee for an appeal of a ruling allowing construction to the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

U.S. District Court Judge Cornelia J. Kennedy had allowed a new start on construction of a 12,000-foot runway paralleling two other runways being generally from the northeastern to southwestern corner of the airport after finding that the WCRC had met federal environmental impact assessment requirements enough to qualify for federal aid in the $32 million project.

Plaintiffs in the case — the schools and the City of Romulus — had maintained that the runway was not needed because of declining air traffic at the airport and the damage it would do to the city's residential population by directing more overflights by giant airliners.

Fadern, who had pressed the case at a total cost of $57,000, but who has received only $30,000 from both governmental bodies to date, had indicated he believes Judge Kennedy erred in her ruling on several points and recommended that an appeal be processed to prevent "spreading the damage" to other homes in Romulus.

The deadline for filing an intent to appeal motion was today.

The motion will be financed with a $100 contribution approved for the matter by the Romulus City Council with the remaining funds coming from the schools.

The school board's agreement to approve the funding of the motion avoided what could be a political blockade by the Romulus City Council of any action which would not result in direct financial gain to the city.

At the 2-hour afternoon meeting with Fadern Dec. 22, Councilman Jimmie C. Raspberry voiced concern about "governmental units fighting me with my own money."

The councilman added that stopping the runway will void any chances for citizens in the city to later recover damages from the airport operators for airline overflights.

However, Fadern urged a continuation of the court fight to "limit the problem geographically in the city" and to "instill a respect in the city by showing the WCRC it is ready to fight for what is right."

Fadern said the appeal will not contain the possibility of escalating costs which nearly doubled the anticipated cost of the fight from early last year.

The attorney added that the appeal to the U.S. Circuit Court would be on "very narrow grounds" which would not leave "avenues open for the litigants to spin their wheels" in legal maneuvers.

School board favors lawsuit

Romulus Board of Education officials may be more enthused about pressing a suit against the operators of Detroit Metropolitan Airport than their counterparts in the city government.

The officials just learned that the Los Angeles School District has received a damage settlement of $19.3 million from the Los Angeles International Airport for environmental damage air overflights have done to school buildings in the city.

According to Jerrold Fadern, the attorney who handled the case, and the same attorney who is urging an appeal of a U.S. District Court judge's ruling which allows expansion of Metropolitan Airport in Romulus, the out-of-court settlement was in response to a suit "which exactly is the same case as we have here in Romulus."

Fadern said the Los Angeles School District contended in the courts that the value of its buildings was decreased and the quality of education offered in them hindered because of aircraft overflights from the airport.

"There were 23 schools involved, and you have to remember this is a voluntary settlement from the operators of the Los Angeles Airport," Fadern said. "The exact case could be pressed here in behalf of four schools in Romulus which suffer with the exact problems."

In the past, school officials had discussed pressing for funds to pay for extra soundproofing in their school buildings.

The buildings affected by the overflights include Merriman, Harrison, Gordonier and Hayti Elementary Schools.

Suit's support needed anew

The quest for support to file a damage suit against the Wayne County Road Commission (WCRC), operators of Detroit Metropolitan Airport in Romulus, for damage done to individual homeowners by airplane overflights has suffered a setback.

Fouad Berry, a homeowner living south of the airport who was the original spark behind citizen participation in a suit against construction of a new runway in the facility, said that a secretary in Mayor James C. Stewart's office "apparently lost" between 1,000 and 1,600 letters from Romulus residents voicing their support for the damage suit.

"These were people who were willing to help finance a suit against the airport operators for drops in their property values due too activity in the airport," Berry said. "Now, we have no way to find them, unless they write again."

Berry said the letters were kept in a box inside the mayor's office but apparently were lost before they could be turned over to him as a means to test support for a damage suit.

The damage suit proposal had been backed by former Romulus Mayor Terry L. Troutt, who offered to use his office as a central gathering point for mailed inquiries on the suit. However, after Troutt

"Someone may have thought they were something to be thrown out at the time, because they were left in a box in the office like they were rubbish or something," said a secretary in the City Hall.

Berry hopes residents who had voiced concern over the damage suit would get in touch with him again.

"They either can call me at 478-5949 or should contact their councilmen in the city to show their concern," Berry said. "I know it's an inconvenience, but the people who were concerned should stay concerned."

Jerrold Fadern, the attorney who handled the original suit against expansion of the airport, said the damage suits is the key to making the WCRC more responsive to the residents.

"I've learned by experience that airport operators don't pay much attention to the surrounding area unless they are forced to pay money for some of the damages the facilities do to the environment," he said. "Once the money comes out of the operators' pockets, they decide to become good neighbors."

He cited three cases in California where airports either changed flight patterns, or shut down during nighttime hours to avoid disturbing residents living near them.

Relationship with Stewart is satisfactory

The leader of the Romulus City Council is satisfied so far with the council's relationship with the city's new mayor.

Gervazio (Jerry) Canejo said there are a few decisions made by Mayor James C. Stewart during the first six weeks since he took office which Canejo would have liked to been informed of, but added: "On the whole, we're getting along."

Canejo said he would have liked to have been consulted about the appointments of the city's new economic development director — Hyle J. Carmichael — the city attorney — Robert Reese — and the city's new engineering firm — Wade, Trim and Associates — but he is satisfied with the way the mayor-council relationship has been going on the whole.

"The attorney has to be approved by the council, and is only on the job temporarily, until we have a full review of his qualifications," Canejo said. "With the others, it appears to be within the mayor's right to hire them."

"The main message we're trying to get across now is that we're willing to work with the mayor, so long as he's willing to work with us."

One potentially sticky situation, the hiring of a secretary for the Romulus City Council office in the City Hall, was avoided when Stewart apparently consulted with some council members before hiring the person filling the job.

"We'd like to have someone we could work with," Canejo said. "The person who has the job was suggested, and the mayor hired her. So far we've been satisfied."

Canejo added that the council secretary position and the hiring practices surrounding it are somewhat hazy.

"In Taylor, the charter stipulates that a council secretary shall be hired by the council," Canejo said. "There's nothing that formal in Romulus to offer guidelines on the job."

When the position was created during the Terry L. Troutt administration, the former mayor hired the council secretary and used that position at times to do work in the mayor's office.

However, four of the seven council members on the Romulus City Council at the time had run with Troutt, and had supported the hiring of the secretary.

On the inside

It's not only state mandated cutbacks that could harm programs in several Western Wayne County townships, but some trimming from the federal government. See story on Page 5.

Supports Lewkowicz

Munger interprets charter

By JIM CARRAVALLAH
Of The Enterprise-Roman Staff

Half the jury is in concerning administrative reshuffling within the Romulus City Hall.

William S. Munger, the attorney engaged by City Treasurer John B. Lewkowicz to interpret the City Charter regarding Mayor James C. Stewart's right to change some of the responsibility formerly assigned to the treasurer, has indicated that Stewart has no power to remove the finance and payroll departments from under Lewkowicz' control.

In a 3-page decision, Munger said: "Any determination by Mayor Stewart that he is to take over the payroll and finance departments certainly is not supported by anything I have been able to find in the City Charter."

Munger checked four separate articles of the charter to conclude that Stewart has the right to hire and fire directors of both departments, but has no power to make them exclusively responsible to the mayor's office.

Referring to the treasurer, Munger wrote: "You are in complete charge of all matters of finance dealing with the receipt and disbursement of money and rendering of accounts to the clerk, and I would assume, to the mayor so that he in turn will be in a position to advise the city on upcoming deficits or surpluses as the case may be."

He added: "The business of reporting to the council all receipts, disbursements and allocation to the various funds of the city is covered by...the charter. Unquestionably that function should be discharged by your office upon information supplied by the finance director."

"The duties of such a finance director do not involve the handling of money but superintending on the mayor's behalf the activities of the various departments to see that none of the money that is included in the budgets of each of the respective departments are dissipated or otherwise handled in an irresponsible manner, and if any such irresponsibility or profligate use of money appears to him to have occurred, to report such matters to the mayor."

Munger added: "Provisions...do nothing more or less than provide (the mayor) with the overall administrative power dealing with budgetary concerns of the city, the duty to relate to the council the financial needs of the city, and to report on income and expense to be administered to on a regular basis to the council."

"This information (the mayor) must obtain from (the treasurer's) office. "In conclusion, (the treasurer is) in charge of payroll and finance as that term relates to the preparation and disbursement and warrants. "The finance director is obliged to report to you and to the mayor in the matter of the routine bookkeeping of the city and the various accounts which comprise the treasury of the city.

"By...express terms... (the treasurer is) required to report not only to the mayor, but to the council all information pertaining to city business as the same is furnished (the treasurer) by the finance director."

Munger is the attorney released by Stewart less than a month ago and replaced with a new city attorney, Robert Reese. Stewart has asked Reese to interpret essentially the same sections of the charter. However, his report hasn't been released by the mayor.

'Winter's picture'

By Rosanne Miller

It is pretty, oh so pretty to look outside my picture window and see
That snow has covered everything the ground, the road, the trees.

I hurried all around the house to open all the shades,
So out of every window
I could see nature's wintery stage.

In the city I had lived
all the years gone past,
But now I'm in the country and I feel I'm home at last.

The snow is falling ever so gently from the sky above,
You would think that you were trapped
inside a soft, warm glove.

A blanket of cotton has covered the ground,
it has fallen there without even making a sound,
And the trees are dressed in coats of white
They can be seen shining in the night.

Yes, I am happy to be part of something so beautiful to see,
For this is my first season here, in the country.

And the snow is falling ever so quietly...
Like feathers sprinkling down from the sky...
Covering me contentedly.

To the editor: My husband, daughter and I moved here recently from Detroit and I must say we really like it in Sumpster Township.
The country really is very pretty.
Since our first season here is winter, I was inspired to write a poem after our first real snowfall, Dec. 11. I hope people will read it and look again at winter because it is a very pretty season and there can be no better place to see it in its beauty than in the country.

As Panax sees it

Milliken gets credit

Some intensive, last minute negotiations before Michigan legislators went home for Christmas ended with no agreement on the touchy question of increased workers' compensation benefits in Michigan.

We can all be thankful for that. The field of workers' compensation — compensation for work related disabilities — is one of the most complicated there is. Good legislation on complicated subjects does not result from hurried, last minute wheeling and dealing.

It was pleasing to see Senate Democrats decide not to try to force through their version of the bill to force a gubernatorial veto. Their decision appeared motivated by a lack of votes more than anything, but nevertheless it helped maintain a rational atmosphere in which to hold discussions.

The real credit for maintaining a sensible approach to the problem, however, goes to Gov. Milliken, who steadfastly refused to accept an unreasonable increase in the overall cost of the program. The governor showed a real understanding of the dilemma this state faces in trying to keep business, and thus jobs, from leaving.

There is no doubt some legislation is needed. It has been 10 years since benefit levels were raised and inflation has eaten into them severely. At the same time the problem of retiree benefits, nonexistent 10 years ago, has assumed incredible proportions.

The total retiree bill 10 years ago was $335,000 in Michigan. This year it will total $76 million. Something obviously must be done to plug loopholes.

Throughout negotiations, Gov. Milliken kept sight of one central fact — Michigan's troubled business climate at present cannot absorb a huge cost increase in the workers' compensation field. Some in the business community had been afraid he would yield when pressure was applied, but he didn't.

His determination to reach a settlement fair to all involved saved the state from what would have been a hastily drawn up, overly generous bill that in the end would have cost jobs.

The stage is now set for a calm, rational discussion of what really is needed. The result can, if everyone is reasonable, be good for those involved — both the legitimate claimants and the businesses who pay benefits.

Hegira today

Therapy given

By WANDA HARRIS
Administrative Assistant
Hegira Program

This week's column will provide information on the role the educational therapist plays in the rehabilitation of clients at the Therapeutic Day Clinic.

Those individuals who reside in Western Wayne County and are interested in utilizing the services provided by our agency may contact our central office located at 1387 Inkster Road, Inkster or call 565-0650 Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m.

When an individual is referred to the educational therapist, a course of study is devised according to the client's needs. At this time, educational therapy is offered on an individual level as well as in group sessions. It is important that the plan of study is one that is motivating as well as educational for the adolescents.

The research and planning for the educational treatment of the client is very extensive. It includes:

In Angola dealings

Senators efforts contain fallacy

By TOM OCHILTREE
Panax Washington Correspondent

Efforts by Sens. John V. Tunney and Alan Cranston to halt further covert CIA aid to African factions resisting Soviet penetration of Angola have a nice popular ring but they contain one dangerous fallacy.

The United States cannot conduct foreign policy like a spectator sport.

This never has worked in all history and with a secretive opponent like the Russians it borders on madness to require the Ford administration to turn every diplomatic card face up on the table.

Yet if Tunney, Cranston and other critics of our present Angolan policy ultimately get their way the administration will have to go hat in hand to Congress for permission to make any move to counter the Russians in the proxy struggle now taking place in the former Portuguese colony.

That frightening prospect explained the tough fight Sen. Robert P. Griffin (R-Mich.) put up on the Senate floor against the Tunney-Cranston amendment to the overall $112.3 billion defense appropriations measure.

"No one wants the United States drawn step by step into another Vietnam," Griffin said. "No one wants to see American troops committed to Angola, and that goes for the President."

"But at the same time, it is very unwise in my view, to cut off other options the President has in the field of international affairs to protect our national interests."

Ultimately the Senate, under prodding by California's two democratic senators, accepted the amendment by a vote of 54-22, but the issue wound up in limbo since the House had no chance to debate this important change before Congress finally adjourned.

This means the issue undoubtedly will have to be fought out again shortly after the new session convenes Jan. 19. In the interim the CIA will be limited in its spending in Angola to $8.2 million. That represents what was left over in special emergency funds and in aid presently in the pipeline.

At the present level of spending that money will run out fairly soon, however. During the past year the CIA distributed about $27 million in the form of money, weapons and other military supplies to the FNLA and UNITA. Those two native Angolan groups have allied themselves against the communist-oriented, Soviet supported MPLA.

American aid for the most part has been channeled through Zaire, which has a 1,200 mile frontier with Angola.

The CIA wants to spend an additional $28 million in the months ahead to counter the heavy Soviet shipment of supplies to the leftist MPLA, the ranks of which have been stiffed by 4,000 to 6,000 Cuban troops.

That $28 million will not be available so long as the Tunney-Cranston amendment stays alive — another indication that a showdown between Tunney and Cranston on the one hand and the administration on the other must come soon.

Some South African troops and white mercenaries have helped stabilize the military position of the FNLA and UNITA.

Why has the Kremlin thrown in Cuban troops on the side of the MPLA? Indeed, why has this been allowed by Fidel Castro who only a few months ago seemed anxious to get his island nation back on friendly terms with the United States?

This is one possible explanation: For more than a decade the Soviet Union has sent Cuba aid amounting to $1.5 million per day. The dispatching of Cuban troops to Angola may represent an attempt by the Russians to collect some "pound-of-flesh" interest on this investment.

The mystery about the Cuban troops shows how little the anti-communist side knows about what the Russians really are up to. On the other hand, the Senate arguments on the Tunney amendment must have given the Russians and other nations around the world plenty to ponder even though the most sensitive aspects were discussed in secret session.

The Russians regard relations between the giant powers as a perpetual tug-of-war. If we avoid or ignore the Kremlin's expansionist schemes we stand before the world as "Paper Tigers." For the Russians to spread that idea about us represents a considerable psychological victory for the Soviet side.

During periods of increasing Soviet pressure, such as now, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger wants possible American reactions and responses known to as few people as possible.

From what Kissinger has said, he still believes it is to the advantage of the United States to keep working for detente with the Soviet Union on one track of American foreign policy while blunting Russian aggressiveness in rim countries such as Angola on the other track.

In any event it works to Washington's disadvantage if constant policy debates ultimately paint the Ford administration into a corner it could not get out of without loss of face before friends and adversaries alike.

This is not some odd version of the super bowl being played out in Angola. The stakes are much too big for that.

Federal money cuts could hurt townships

It's not only state mandated budget cuts which may take money away from needed programs in the area.

The federal government is considering a cut in shared revenues which Wayne County was to distribute to local communities as part of the comprehensive Federal Block Grant community development program.

Wayne County Board of Commissioners Chairman Roscoe L. Bobo said that Van Buren and Sumpter townships are among the 18 communities in the area which could be penalized by a federal proposal to insure metropolitan cities against any cut-back in block grant funds at the expense of urban counties.

The proposal, which threatens the communities, was from Sen. Edward Brooke (D-Mass.) who proposed that block grant allocations remain the same in metropolitan cities despite a potential $100 million cutback in the block grant funds during 1977.

"This would have an extremely negative effect on the plans of the 18 communities which now make up the Wayne County urban coalition and the six communities that will be members in 1976," Bobo said.

The chairman has been lobbying in the nation's Capital as part of what he terms "a virtual stampede on Washington" for a fair shake in the federal allotments.

"If any cuts are to be made, they should be on an across-the-board basis," Bobo said.

There appears to be some hope for an improvement in the savings formula, according to Bobo.

"Sen. Alan Cranston of California plans to offer a substitute amendment that favors equal treatment of urban counties," Bobo said.

The chairman is lobbying for adoption of the Cranston amendment while also fighting for a possible $4 billion outlay for economically distressed cities, counties and states.

Bobo has sent mailgrams to congressmen from Wayne County and chairmen of boards of commissioners throughout the state urging support of the money for economically distressed areas.

The proposal would offer $1.5 million in direct aid for financially distressed governments and another $2.5 billion for emergency public works assistance.

Jaycees seek teen couriers

Youth For Understanding Inc., the largest teenaged student program in the world, is teaming up with the Michigan Jaycees to offer scholarships to nine state youths to carry Bicentennial greetings to foreign countries during the summer of 1976.

It is a part of a national project sponsored by Youth For Understanding called the Bicentennial Courier Program, in which 184 youths will be selected nationwide to go to foreign countries during America's 200th birthday. Each youth will be delivering Bicentennial messages to one of 23 countries around the world.

To qualify as one of the nine Michigan couriers, students will be selected on the basis of a 700- to 1,000-word essay written about America's Bicentennial. The essay subject can be on one of three topics — "The Nation's Heritage," "Future Horizons" or "The Benefits of Sharing." They must be submitted to the Youth For Understanding Bicentennial Coordinator by Feb. 1. The winners will be selected on or before April 1 and designated as official Bicentennial couriers.

Any students interested in the Bicentennial Courier Program should contact the social studies department in their high school or State Coordinator Richard Posthumus, 805 Stoddard Building, Lansing 48933.

Belleville councilman, wife mark silver year

Belleville Councilman and Mrs. Robert Tontalo of 37 Madelon St., Belleville, marked their 25th wedding anniversary at a party given on the afternoon of Dec. 14.

Mrs. Tontalo was Betty Cawthon when she exchanged nuptial vows and rings with her high school sweetheart on Dec. 16, 1950 at St. Anthony's Church which then was a tiny white spired building at the corner of Main and First Streets.

The Tontalos, who have made their home in Belleville all their married lives, have four daughters, Mrs. Dale (Patti) Burger of Wayne; Mrs. Dennis (Sherry) Ferris of Ypsilanti; Mrs. Lance (Sandy) Ammon of Belleville and Beckie, at home.

Given by the three married children and their grandmother, Mrs. John Tontalo of Belleville, at the Burger's new home in Wayne, the afternoon party was attended by some 25 guests including two of the couple's bridesmaids, Mrs. Helen Tontalo of Wayne and Mrs. Gwen Henderson of Dearborn. Others arrived from Ypsilanti, Belleville, Wayne and Dearborn for the open house buffet and 3-tier wedding cake made by Mrs. Lillie Burger of Belleville.

The silver anniversary pair who have always been active in their community are members of St. Anthony's Church where Bob serves on the council and is a member of the Men's Club and Usher's Staff. As part of the Belleville City Council, he serves as fire and cemetery commissioner. He is an accountant for Webb Forging of Belleville.

His wife, Betty, has been affiliated with the Mothers Club, CCD program and Altar Society of her church, has been a Girl Scout leader, a community volunteer on numerous occasions including the Bicentennial Committee and currently works parttime as a paraprofessional at Edgemont Elementary School's kindergarten.

Leroy Grays visit grandson in Philippines

The Grays of Eureka Road, Romulus — LeRoy and Betty — had a definite reason for recently traveling to the Philippine Islands. The main attraction, usually of a tourist nature was this time strictly "family."

The arrival of a new grandson, Stephen Philip Gray, on Sept. 1 prompted the plans for the big trip. The 9-lb.-8-oz. baby was born to the Gray's son and wife, Tony and Michelle Gray, and is the little brother of Marc Anthony Gray.

Tony is stationed at Clark Air Force Base with the 20th Aeromedical Airlift Squadron where he flies the C-9 military plane.

Other highlights of the vacation were a visit to the Pagsonjan Rapids in Pagsonjan, Laguna and trips to wood carving, shoe and capice shell factories where all the work is done by hand; there is no machinery.

Mrs. Gray also had the pleasure of attending a luncheon at which the guest speaker was the mother of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos. She and her daughter-in-law spent a week, too, in Mainland China on the islands of Kawloon and Hong Kong where they enjoyed shopping and sight seeing.

On the return trip, the Grays traveled by way of Okinawa, Tokyo, and Anchorage, Alaska. Mrs. Gray said the transition from 95-degree weather in the Philippines to 20-below temperatures in Alaska was "quite a change."

Deadline date nearing for 'Fashion of the Past' Bicentennial program

The Van Buren Township Bicentennial Committee, which is planning its 1976 debut centered around a fashion show, wishes to remind those interested in entering that "D-Day" (deadline) is close at hand. In fact, it's Jan. 12!

"Fashions of the Past" will be among the first Bicentennial observances in the area and is scheduled for 8 p.m. Jan. 30 at the Van Buren Township Hall. Please make a note on your social calendar since this is one event you're not going to want to miss.

Entry forms are still available at the Van Buren Township Hall, the Belleville City Hall and the So-Fro Fabric Shop in Lakewood Shopping Center.

Categories to select from are ladies frontier, everyday and evening dress and undergarments; men's frontier, daytime dress and gentleman or statesman garb. Sewing may also be done for a boy or girl or male or female American Indian as well as any costume a person might consider appropriate.

Once again, readers are reminded that the time period to be covered in your sewing "bee" is the first 100 years of Americana—from 1776-1876. Items are to be made especially for this show, fashioned from patterns available in fabric stores or from an original which would be authentic when duplicated.

Apparel may be worn by the seamstress or tailor or by someone designated to model the garment. Either person must be a resident of Van Buren Township or the City of Belleville.

Mary Ann Bassett is chairman of the show and her assistants include Edward and Clea Luebke, Phyllis Seaman, Shirley Carnahan, Gayle Patterson, Debbie Zaborski and Tom Russell.

Since the late January date for the show will practically coincide with the celebration of Michigan's birthday, it will be a double occasion for a "toast" — one to our county and one to our state which entered the Union on Jan. 26, 1837.

Those with talents in the sewing basket department are urged to get their costumes planned and their entries in as soon as possible. Deadline again for entering is Jan. 12. If you are unable to fill out a regular entry form, please send the category information along with your name, address, phone number, name of costume maker, name of model and the year of the costume plus any other pertinent data to Van Buren Township Bicentennial Fashion Committee, P.O. Box 221, Belleville 48111. Township and city residents are both welcome to take part.

ATTENDS SHOW — Mrs. A. L. Greene (far right) of Denton Road was the recent hostess for a group of Belleville residents. The group joined a sell-out crowd of 330 for a fall fashion show and luncheon benefitting Harper Hospital's building fund. Mrs. Greene's husband is an assistant administrator of the hospital. The program, sponsored by the Harper Hospital Auxiliary, was held at the Country Club of Detroit.

Cathy Nolen earns BS degree at Grand Valley

Among the recent graduates of Grand Valley State College (GVSC) in Allendale, Mich. was Cathy Nolen, a 1972 alumna of Romulus High School. Miss Nolen received a bachelor of science degree in group social studies with a psychological emphasis and also an elementary teaching certificate.

Her student teaching days, 11 weeks in all, were a switch from the usual area placements since she traveled to Anaco, Venezuela to teach second grade and journalism at Escuela Anaco (escuela meaning "school.") She and another Grand Valley student, Nora Benson of Ludington, were on the staff of the same school while two of their male counterparts had their assignments in San Tome, Venezuela. Both are American schools which children of American oil company executives and employees attend. Most of the children are bilingual.

Fuller baby is heir of two firefighters

There's a future fire fighter making typical new baby sounds at 8559 Belleville Road, Belleville, the home of Tom and Carol Fuller.

The infant, the couple's first child, arrived Dec. 18 at Beyer Hospital-in-time for his dad to pass out cigars at the annual fireman's Christmas party the following night.

The new dad is a volunteer with the Van Buren Township Fire Dept. No. 2. His own father Robert Fuller, is fire chief of Ypsilanti Township. In honor of his second grandson's arrival, the senior Fuller presented the new heir with a junior fire marshal helmet and badge as well as a bright red coverall suit.

The 7-lb.-5oz. baby's mother is the former Carol McCarty, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. McCarty of Mida Drive, Belleville.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Nolen Jr. now of Fletcher, Okla., Miss Nolen makes her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J.V. Hubner of Taylor, when not at school.

Following the holiday recess she plans to return to HVSC to take extra courses for a special education certificate. In her pre-graduate days, Miss Nolen was a pom pon girl and worked on the school paper, "The Lantern" for three years.

MUSICAL NOTES

by Doug Brown

Stephen Foster has always been one of America's best known and loved composers. Among his nonminstrel songs, the best known is, "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair", in his original manuscript book, Foster wrote the name as "Jennie", definitely indicating that he had his wife Jane in mind, for she was often affectionately known as Jennie. But the publishers preferred "Jeanie" and brought the song out with this name. "Jeanie" has not always been so popular — after the composer's death, when the copyright was renewed, the royalties the song accumulated amounted to 75 cents.

Enjoy a new love — playing your own favorite instrument. It's fun and relaxing. DOUG BROWN MUSIC, 9219 S. Wayne Rd., Romulus, offers the finest selection of drums, clarinets, flutes, saxophones and trombones as well as pianos, organs and string instruments. Stop in soon, won't you? Belleville High School wins holiday cage title

By TOM MOORADIAN
Sports Editor

Belleville High cagers presented their third-year coach Tom Niemi with a belated Christmas gift Saturday night at the expense of Wayne Memorial.

The Tigers purchased the Holiday Basketball Tournament championship with a stunning 60-51 victory over Coach Bill Hawley's Zebras.

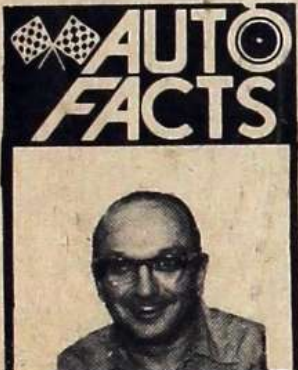

It was the first time in Niemi's three-year tenure as the Tiger's head coach that Belleville had captured the coveted title.

"I'm proud of our kids," said Niemi. "I think the victory showed we have an outstanding bench. Players such as Dennis (Harold) and MacArthur (Lance) played exceptionally well for us on this series."

Hawley pinpointed his team's 26 turnovers as "one of the factors for our defeat."

"But, we have to give Belleville a lot of credit. They got the job done," Hawley added. "We had our chances, especially when some of their starters got into foul trouble, and didn't capitalize on the situation."

Late in the first period Belleville's prolific scorer Dennis Easley and later center Narvell Turner sustained their third personal fouls and were pulled for the game.

by Jr. Kosin

Warning flares should be carried in your car at all times, and should be set out as soon as possible after an accident or breakdown happens. Lighting a flare is simple. Just pull up the cloth tab which frees the caps and exposes the matchlike head of the flare. The cap top has a strike surface similar to that on a box of safety matches. Point the head of the flare away from you and strike it with the cap top. As soon as the flare ignites, firmly press its spiked end into the ground or the road surface.

Emergency equipment of all kinds for foreign and domestic cars is available at KOSIN'S AUTO PARTS, 26831 Michigan, Inkster. We carry everything your car needs to keep running in A-1 condition; we also carry the tools you need to do the work. Our friendly staff will be happy to help you select the proper parts for your car. We also have a complete machine shop for such jobs as turning brake drums, valve work, and rebuilding engines. Stop in any day from 8 A.M. until 8 P.M., or Saturdays until 5 P.M., or call us at 563-3894. Bank Americard and Master Charge are honored.

AUTO FACT:

Place flares on the shoulder, but as close to the road surface as possible.

Their replacements, MacArthur and Dennis, carried out their assignments capably.

Wayne worked its way to a 13-12 first period lead on the strength of seven of 11 at the free throw line and baskets by Bill Crews, Pat Sheridan and Rick Preston. Belleville kept abreast with a pair of baskets by Easley, and 2-pointers from Cornell Grantham, Kevin Barnes and Turner.

Two last minute personal fouls to Easley removed him from the contest late in that period.

Back-to-back Belleville baskets by James Thompson and MacArthur gave the Tigers a 16-13 edge and, though the game stayed close the rest of the way, Belleville never relinquished the lead.

Sheridan pumped in six of Wayne's eight points, four of those at the free throw line, in the second period, while Jeff Braun's layup accounted for the only other Zebra points in that frame.

Belleville protected its 24-21 halftime margin, despite Wayne's determined full-court press. The Tigers increased that margin to nine, 41-32, for three periods before Wayne rallied back in the fourth period.

That rally, sparked by Pat Bledsoe's 3-point play, carried Wayne to within six points of catching the Tigers. With 30 seconds left, Wayne's Sheridan had a jumper nullified because of goaltending. That basket would have brought them within four points.

Turner then sank a layup and Thompsons got a basket to seal Belleville's victory.

Sheridan finished the night with six field goals and six free throws for the game high of 18 points. Braun was the only other Wayne cager in double figures. He had 11.

Thompkins and Turner led a balanced Belleville attack, splitting 28 points. MacArthur and Easley each had 10 points.

Belleville will carry a 6-won-lost record into the Jan. 9th game against highly-touted Plymouth Salem, a team considered one of the best in the state and defending Suburban 8 Conference champ.

However, the Rocks have not won on the Belleville court in the past two years.

Wayne resumes action

Jan. 6 against Lincoln Park, a Great Lakes 8 Conference rival.

Glenn '5' falls to BHS in overtime, 62-56

Westland John Glenn's best performance of the year nearly upset tourney-favorite Belleville in the first round of the Holiday Tournament.

Belleville staged a torrid comeback, scoring seven points in the final 50 seconds to tie the host at 54-all, forcing the game into a 3-minute overtime.

In the extra period, Belleville outscored the Rockets 8-2 to win the cliffhanger, 62-56. The Belleville victory avenged last year's 77-75 loss to Glenn in the tournament finals.

The tourney title was the first for third-year Belleville coach Tom Niemi.

"I felt our boys played their best game of the year," said Gordie Davis, Glenn coach. "I'm real proud at the way they played. We had a lot of patience and we showed a lot of poise."

Belleville's Niemi commented, "that our kids refused to quit, and that's a mark of championship team."

"These kids played their hearts out right to the end," Niemi added.

Down by seven points with one minute remaining in the game, Belleville struck back when Dennis Easley was awarded a pair of free throws. Easley sank the first, then missed the second which was tapped in by Narvell Turner.

Belleville's full court press paid off as the Tigers forced the Rockets into a turnover. A perfect feed by Harold Dennis to Turner gave the Tigers two more points, closing the gap to a basket.

Belleville got a break when Glenn's attempt to get the ball downcourt struck the rafter and the ball was handed over to the Tigers with three seconds left.

Then James Thompson scored on a jump from a top of the key totie the game at 54-54.

Belleville ripped off the first six points in the extra period to win the crucial game.

It was Glenn that took the initiative in the early stages. Led by 6-5 center George Roberts who scored seven of his 17 points in the first period, the Westlanders shot to a 15-10 lead.

Turner and Easley sparked a Tiger rally, getting six and five points, in the second period that lifted Belleville to a 27-23 halftime advantage.

Glenn refused to quit. They outscored their visitors 14-10 in the next eight minutes as Todd DeLuca and Dan Diadium each contributed four points then managed to build up a seven-point lead in the fourth period before the roof fell in on them.

Turner edged Diadium for individual scoring honors. The Belleville senior tallied 11 field goals and one free throw for 23 points while Diadium collected 21. Easley also was in double figures with 18 and Thompsons finished with 13.

Robert's 17 points provided the Rockets with the only other cager in two figures.

For the first time this year Belleville lost the battle of the boards, 37-25. However, the Tigers picked up 15 "steals," nine of those by Easley.

Belleville also hit 29 of 72 shots from the floor for a meager 39 percent as compared to Glenn's 23 of 51 for 45 percent.

Cholesterol food trims alcohol's effects

A cholesterol-laden diet may add extra pounds but it will slow down the effects of New Year's holiday drinking, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

Realizing that 80 percent of Michigan motorists will take a drink and then drive during the holiday season, Auto Club asked Michigan State University (MSU) nutritionists for tips on how to counteract the adverse effects of alcohol.

Their advice is to load up on food high in fat content—soups swimming in heavy cream, salad dressings rich with mayonnaise, baked ham, cookies and pastries filled with lots of butter, chocolates and nuts.

The reason for this is that food high in fat content stays in the stomach longer, absorbing the alcohol and slowing its entry into the bloodstream, the nutritionists said.

Holiday hosts also should provide high-fat snacks to munch on at the pre-dinner cocktail hour. Some suggestions for high-fat, party food include potato chips and any rich, salty commercial crackers, accompanied by dips made from sour cream or cheese balls with a cream cheese and cheddar cheese base. If you have to choose between an olive and a pickle, take the olive with all its oil, the MSU nutritionists advise.

Auto Club's search for a "common sense" guide to holiday partying is part of its annual "First a Friend, Then a Host" (FAFTH) program, which was started in 1966 to help reduce holiday traffic deaths.

Here are some tips for party-givers:

(1) If a guest appears to have had too much to drink, make sure someone else gives him a ride home, or call a taxi.

(2) Stop serving alcoholic beverages at least an hour before the party ends.

(3) Always make sure there are plenty of non-alcoholic beverages or coffee in plain view should your guests prefer to limit their drinking.

(4) Make sure there are plenty of those high-fat snacks to munch on when guests are partaking of a little holiday cheer.

MSU nutritionists cautioned that Americans' diets already are too high in fat content. But they conceded that many people stop counting calories during the holiday season. In view of this, a high-fat diet is the one that will best enable drinking party-goers to help keep from becoming unfit motorists.

So, if you are going to offer guests a relish tray before dinner, make sure there are plenty of olives and pile lots of cream cheese and sour cream on those celery sticks. Then, follow it up with a high-fat dinner rich with cream sauce, butter, fatty meat and gravy, and top it off with a dessert of ice cream and sauce or pastries.

Your guests may add a few pounds but these high-fat goodies will slow down the effects of the drinks they consume and maybe save a few lives on the drive home after the party's over.

Holiday party-goers: 'Think fat' and live

The slim look might be chic, but motorists who will participate in social drinking this holiday are advised to "think fat."

A full stomach helps retard the flow of alcohol from the stomach into the blood, and a cholesterol-laden diet acts best to retard the intoxicating effects of liquor.

Here is a complete menu selected from several high-fat recipes supplied to Automobile Club of Michigan by Michigan State University specialists in food science and human nutrition that party-goers or hosts might want to consider:

Try serving, or eating, chicken velvet soup, baked ham with mustard sauce, baked stuffed potatoes, frozen fruit salad and french vanilla ice cream with chocolate mint sauce.

Here's how to make them:

CHICKEN VELVET SOUP

one-third cup butter
¾ cup flour
6 cups chicken stock
1 cup warm milk
1 cup warm cream
1½ cups finely diced chicken
½ teaspoon salt
pepper to taste

Melt butter; add flour and cook over low heat until well-blended; and two cups of hot chicken stock and the warm milk and cream. Cook slowly, stirring frequently until thick. Add remaining four cups of chicken stock and chicken and heat to boiling. Season with salt and pepper. Serves eight.

MUSTARD SAUCE

1 tablespoon chopped onion
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk or light cream
3 tablespoons prepared mustard

½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Brown onions slightly in butter; add flour, then milk or cream to make a sauce. When thick, add mustard. Makes one cup.

BAKED STUFFED POTATOES

8 Idaho potatoes
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup (or more) sour cream
parmesan cheese
salt and pepper

Bake potatoes about 40 minutes to one hour, depending on size. When half done, puncture skins once with fork to allow steam to escape, then return them to oven to finish baking. When completely baked, cut them in half lengthwise, scoop out pulp and mash with fork. (Mixture should be somewhat lumpy). Add about two tablespoons butter and salt and pepper to taste. Then add sour cream and continue mashing to get proper consistency for stuffing mixture into potato shells or place it in a greased casserole. Then sprinkle potato mixture with parmesan cheese and return them to oven for about 30-40 minutes before serving.

FROZEN FRUIT SALAD

½ cup each of Royal Ann and Bing cherries halved and pitted
½ cup each of canned pears, peaches and pineapple diced and drained
¼ cup powdered sugar
½ cup pineapple juice
½ cup mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon lemon rind, grated
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
½ cup marshmallows

Mix all of the diced fruits and set aside to drain; mix powdered sugar, pineapple juice, mayonnaise and grated lemon rind until sugar is dissolved. The fold in whipped cream, fruit and marshmallows; place in molds, and freeze. Serves eight.

Ailment keeps congressman from balloting

Although Congressman William D. Ford (D-15th District) missed a crucial vote to help override a veto of a Congressional bill to continue tax cuts into next year, he indicated he had been able to accomplish more than most members of Congress to continue the cuts.

Ford had entered the hospital shortly before a crucial vote on overriding President Ford's veto of a continuation of a $25 billion tax cut into the next year for observation after suffering abdominal pains, which was later diagnosed as diverticulitis, a problem similar to appendicitis.

However, when the Congressman learned of the scheduled over-ride vote and found out he should not leave the hospital, he arranged a parliamentary maneuver known as a "live pair" with a congressman he knew would vote to uphold the president's veto of the bill.

In the arrangement, the congressman who would have voted to uphold the veto agreed to withhold his vote in deference to the 15th District Representative's inability to cast his vote on the question.

The effort almost was overruled by a House official who indicated Congressman Ford must find yet another vote to balance the withheld vote.

Ford turned to Michigan Congressman James G. O'Hara (D-12th District), one of the top parliamentarians in the House, who found a precedent for the maneuver and upheld the "live pair."

Despite the action, the House fell 17 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to override President Ford's veto.

The maneuvering proved to be unnecessary later, when the House and Senate voted to pass a tax cut bill which included language agreeable to President Ford.

President Ford had held out for language in the tax cut proposal which would indicate that Congress would place a spending ceiling on the yet-to-be-adopted fiscal 1977 budget at $395 billion.

The last-minute Congressional action, and later compromise, assured area residents of keeping between $3 and $5 per week in their paychecks which would have been deducted had the $25 billion tax cut been eliminated.

Project helps students

There is no recommendation like experience. As one teacher once said: "There is no learning like experience."

For students in the advertising art, retailing art and journalism classes at John Glenn High School, Wayne Memorial High School, Belleville High School and Romulus High School learning by experience has replaced the ad textbook.

This section has been their first step into the actual work involved in developing ads for publication.

In this section

staged in conjunction with Associated Newspapers, the students have been able to collect first hand knowledge of the free enterprise system while acquiring practical experience in the business work world.

The project called Adcraft assigned teams of students to work together in developing ads for participating merchants.

These young businessmen did leg work and devoted hours outside of class to meet the qualifications of their respective clients.

The ads are their work. They decided along with the merchants what kind of ad to run and what to promote. They developed layout copy as well as writing it, submitted the finished ad for the businessmen's approval and finally, prepared the finished art work for insertion in this special section.

When looking through the section readers should keep in mind the idea behind the Adcraft program. It's for experience. And it's to help high school students learn about their business, and merchants to communicate with the youth market as well as their parents.

This section was not the work of a student under the close direction of an advisor. Rather his own work with the advisor acting as a source of information and clarification.

Adcraft is a step toward bringing the classroom into the real world. We hope our readers find it as interesting as the students who tackled the composition did.

Students do ads for merchants

Exchanging ideas

Designing isn't all work and no play as Wayne Memorial High School students Jesse James and Becky Pierce discover. They are sharing their ideas about an ad for a local merchant with business teacher Tim Cornick. The students were just two of the many from four area high schools participating in the Adcraft project, a learning experience in ad make-up. Many local merchants took part in the project, helping the students prepare for their future in the advertising field.

The Adcraft campaign in conjunction with Associated Newspapers and local merchants gave students a taste of what the advertising craft is all about. There were many students at Wayne Memorial, John Glenn, Romulus and Belleville high schools who spent many hours of lip-biting concentration on their ads, although not all the ads composed are reproduced in this section.

Participating students at Wayne Memorial High School are: Sandy Austin, Pam Manley and Janet Hargrove working for Karate Studio; Mark White, Jesse James and Becky Pierce for Five M; Sue Highlan, Sue Holmgren and Mary Donovan for Mulhollands; Kathy Strissom, Barbara Boik and Kinday Takach for Dancers Fashions; Robin Winkler, Pat Kozlowski, and Judy Boyd for Stuarts; Cherrie Tiece, Charlene Basilisco and Kim Kadlec for Wayne Music Center, and Kevin Kassel and George Furcan for Burton Heating and Plumbing.

Students from John Glenn High School are: Phillip Abraham and Ken Swindle for O'Dell Chiropractic Life Center; Bruce Alexander, Sue Moore, Tim Smith, Mark Sumner and Agron Vasha for Westland Center; Louis Balazsi and Doug Clark for Able Table and Chair; Bob Bauser and Bill Hunt for Bike-O-Rama; Clay Bennett, Gary Miller and Diann Urbaniak for Associated Newspapers, and Richard Bowyer, Brian Conger, Theresa Haver and Bill Miller for Sheer Dimensions.

Students from Romulus High School are: Stacey Carter and Pam Blevins for Home Federal Savings; John Taylor, Michele Bradley and Chuck Burch for Romulus Auto Supply; Steve Hutchinson and Kris Nasi for Blitz Baby; Laura Moody and Gwen Champagne for Doug Brown Music; Missy Owens and Carol Ignasiak for Romulus Hardware and Elliott Crews and Bob Hamilton for Bourbeaus.

Students from Belleville are: Amy Price and Claudia Bonds for Hoots Boots; Laurie Golden, Sally Smith and Robin Wilson for Hoots Kentucky Fried Chicken; Clifford Sorensen, John Huddleston and Robin Pyshnik for Foodville; Dale Zaborowski and Darryl Parrish for Roberts Brothers; Karin Hurd and Tommy Stewart for Coy Kendall; Kathy Buifant and Sheila Compton for Buds TV; Dennis Himes and Mark Weiss for Hamilton Hardware, and Kathy Patterson and Gail Clark for Steinhauer Realty.

Teacher says

Project is good experience

"Advertising is serious business," said Donald Immen, business teacher at John Glenn High School.

Immen maintains that the best way to teach advertising is to advertise.

"It's good experience to actually see some work produced," he said. "It makes working in the classroom more serious."

According to Immen learning by experience gives students a good taste of what their craft is all about.

Immen along with business teacher Vic Koos and Roy Hocking of the Graphic Department coordinated the Adcraft program at Glenn. The school utilized the two departments to help students produce ads for participating merchants.

After Associated Newspapers sold ads for the students, they went out in small groups to contact the merchants.

"They got an idea of what some of the merchants wanted or some left it wide open for them," Immen said.

The project of creating ads for merchants is part of the Adcraft program worked out between Associated and the schools to help simulate real business situations. Eighteen students from the school worked on the project and some of the ads in this edition are theirs.

The Graphic Department was utilized to put the finishing touches to the layout but the ad copy and ideas were generated by the students themselves.

"The students had to make the initial contact with the merchant to discuss what he wanted in the ad," Immen said. "Later the completed ads would have to pass the scrutiny of the merchants."

"I think most of the students involved in the project were pleased with the end result. I got mostly positive feedback from them," he added.

The work of learning by doing is just one of the many ways that the advertising classes have utilized the techniques of publicity.

Last year the advertising classes prepared posters to promote the school carnival.

"I think the Adcraft project was more serious than the carnival promotion because it was an exercise that went beyond the classroom," Immen said.

He added that he would like to see the Adcraft campaign continue next year, but with a few more retailers involved.

The more retailers involved the more students will be able to work on the project," he said. "There were more students this year that would have liked to have been involved."

Last year about 30 students from three classes were involved in the program.

To develop ads for the project students used lettering and headlining devices from the Graphics Department, original art work drawn by themselves and photographs or pictures obtained from the merchants.

Constructive criticism

In the business world, everyone has to learn to accept constructive criticism as Bruce Alexander learns. Here teacher Jerry Brown advises Bruce on how to spruce up his ad which is a part of the Adcraft project. Bruce is a student at John Glenn High School in Westland.

CHIROPRACTIC COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE

ARE YOU LIVING OR JUST EXISTING?

Have you ever stopped and noticed that in this fast Hum-drum world people are racing about to get here and there. They are in a hurry to get nowhere!

If you want more out of life you had better put more into it. If you don't start by putting yourself into the swing of things by taking care of your body your Creator endowed you with, it will never last to see you thru the allotted time your Creator set aside for you in this journey on the proving ground called LIFE!!

How you take care of what Health you have and how you can attain and maintain good health should be at the top of your list. More important than the golf game, the dance, the vacation, what really could be more important to you than LIFE ITSELF!

People take their body too much for granted. They don't think about how the body is able to breathe or digest the conglomeration of food put into it. They do not have to consider from where the next breath of air is coming. They just breathe, never checking to make sure that the lungs have the proper nerve energy necessary to supply the demand that they put their bodies under.

They just take it for granted until some symptom or pain pops up. They think their problem just appeared yesterday, but how wrong they really are!

A brick layer has to lay one brick upon another before he can complete a wall of a house. Likewise, the tissue and cellular structures of the human body have to go thru a building-up process to attain and maintain health.

You have to help your body to be consistent. Health and abundant life just do not happen naturally, unless you conform to the natural laws of nature and common sense.

Life truly is what you will put into it - and it is also exactly what you will get out of it. If you take care of your body it will take care of you.

The best way to take care of your body is to see to it that it has the best possible "Life-Giving Nerve Supply" to assist all body organs and tissues. Without proper nerve supply your body will not be able to carry out its duties. When one part of the body cannot function properly, it often times throws an overload on another organ in the body. When this happens the body is thrown into a compensatory state (this is a state whereby another organ assists or tries to take over the weaker organ's function) until the body can bring up the internal resistance of that organ so that it can once again carry out its normal function. Most people rush to the M.D. when a symptom arises and tell him about the symptom or where the pain is and are given a pill or shot to relieve the pain.

Great ... the pain is gone because the pill or shot you took has numbed that tissue and the part of the brain and nervous system that controls that tissue or organ. Think ... doesn't it make more sense to find out why the problem occurred and what caused it before you pollute your blood stream with poison (drugs) and create another problem. Before long the drug that you are taking has caused you several different problems and now you are not taking one drug but several.

You are taking one drug to speed your heart up, another drug to thin out your blood stream and another to relax your tensions and one for your "Poor old" upset stomach that has to put up with all the garbage you have thrown into it.

Your stomach wants to get rid of the poison you have put into your system, but you will not let it because you take antacids and maalox to keep things down. You have done everything but help the body do its own thing!

Your body can make every drug known and unknown to man. All it has to do is have the proper "Life-Giving Nerve Supply" to control and regulate the body's functions.

In Adcraft project

Wayne Memorial students accept challenge

Although advertising is not a new experience to students at Wayne Memorial High School, the adcraft campaign proved to be a challenge. Retailing instructor Jim Cornick feels that the Adcraft project was more realistic than school work and a little more difficult. Retailing students at the school produce ads for the school store to publicize their merchandise. They conduct poster campaigns and put on commercials over the public address system. Cornick calls the store a "retailing lab." "The students design ads for the school newspaper and work in the store one day a week," he said. The basic concept of the store deviates from traditionally taught classes which pay strict attention to the textbook. Cornick feels that a teacher can spend a lot of time using textbooks but not give his students the benefit that practical experience offers. Getting practical experience is the whole point behind the Adcraft campaign, that the students have worked on in conjunction with Associated Newspapers. "Students had to put in a considerable amount of legwork to complete their assignments," Cornick said. Students spent on the average of one half hour a day in class on the project plus hours outside of class. Some students made two or three visits to the merchants making sure that their ads met with the proper specifications. "As an advertisement writer they have had to do what the merchants want," Cornick said. "They've had to have their ads approved by the merchant. That made it more of a challenge."

Advertising for the school store gave the students more freedom and an opportunity to be more creative than the Adcraft program, the teacher said. "Students could experiment more with the store ads, but working for a merchant provided a real challenge," he added. Cornick feels that the Adcraft program was a good experience for the students because it gave them an opportunity to simulate a real business experience.

The 21 students in the class worked out seven ads for the section, using art books from Associated Newspapers, logos from the stores and original work and copy. Cornick said he would like to see the Adcraft project expanded in the future. "The time element is important especially since a lot of the work has to be completed outside of class," Cornick added. "It's impressive to see your work and name in the newspaper." Last year 19 students worked on the program for nine merchants.

The business world

Students at Wayne Memorial High School got a taste of the real business world as they tackled their respective assignments for the Adcraft project. Here Jesse James and Barbara Bolik debate over which design displays their ad the best. Students at Wayne Memorial, Belleville and Romulus high schools did exactly the same. Classmates at all the schools developed ads for merchants. Many of the ads are displayed in this section.

The finishing touch

Artist Sue Moore adds a dab of ink to her advertisement to give it the finishing touch and a professional look. Sue is one of the students at John Glenn High School who were involved on the Adcraft project in conjunction with Associated Newspapers and local merchants. Associated Newspapers publishes The Daily Eagle, The Canton Eagle, The Belleville Enterprise and The Romulus Roman.

Teens find challenge

For Romulus High School students the Adcraft program was a challenging new experience that helped shed some light onto the practices of the real business world. Students had an opportunity to work under simulated pressures involved in retail advertising. About 13 second-year journalism students participated in the campaign.

sort of reluctant at first, but after they made their first contact it was a lot easier," said Patricia Derry, journalism teacher and coordinator of the program for the school. Miss Derry teaches the introductory course and advanced course in journalism. "In the second year course, students produce the school newspaper and are pretty independent. I advise them but most of the work is done by themselves," she said. Miss Derry, like the other teachers who helped coordinate the program for their respective high schools, shares the philosophy that the best teacher is experience. "For many students this was the first time they worked with layout and the devices of lettering and headlining," she said. The Adcraft program at Romulus High was an experimental project, so many of the kinks didn't get worked out until the completion date, she added. "If I help coordinate this program in the future I would like to bring other departments into the project because so much is involved," Miss Derry said. "It produces a strain on just one department."

Miss Derry felt they could have utilized other departments in the project, especially the Art Department in putting the finishing touches on the ad layout. "I really think the program was a fascinating learning experience," she added. She felt the proximity of the merchant and his cooperation helped the project promote good community relations. "I think many of the students enjoyed working with their ads once they had started consulting with the merchants. I would like to see the campaign continue next year," she said. In producing their ads the students had to utilize their own creative abilities to write the copy, do the art work and complete the layout.

Working on advertisement

The Adcraft program helps students at John Glenn, Wayne Memorial, Belleville and Romulus high schools learn to work together and share ideas. Here Theresa Haver and Rick Bowyer of John Glenn in Westland try their hand at creating an advertisement.

Visual appeal

It's fun designing an ad, but once in a while a student needs some professional advice. Here Sandy Austin and Kevin Kassel discuss the visual appeal of different ad displays with teacher Dan Connell. Their work was a part of the Adcraft project held in conjunction with this newspaper and many local businesses.

Belleville teens participate Business students at Belleville High School who participated in the Adcraft project found their introduction into the world of advertising to be a stimulating experience.

Most of the students involved in the program work on a co-op basis in the community and are familiar with the merchants who bought ad space in this section.

Unlike Wayne Memorial and John Glenn High Schools this was Belleville's first encounter with the Adcraft campaign.

Dean Payne, business teacher and director for the project, felt that the first-run program was quite successful.

"Adcraft gave the students a chance to get some real practical experience that the co-op program could not afford," he said.

The only pressing problems that students experienced was the time limit. Students getting a late start on their projects had to reduce the amount of time scanning their imaginations and thus reduced production time.

Payne, like the other business teachers in-involved in the campaign, deviates from traditional textbook teaching.

"I like to combine traditional teaching methods with more experimental methods," he said.

Payne believes that students can glean as much valuable information from first-hand experience as from a textbook. He feels that students enjoy working independently because it gives them an opportunity to be more creative and gives them more freedom.

All the students at all the schools who cooperated in the campaign had to make contact with the merchant before preparing a layout presentation.

Payne said his students have never done a project before which involved producing a presentation for a client.

The students involved in the program not only had to work for a grade but had to meet the specifications of their client and work under their scrutiny.

Eighteen students worked on ads for eight different merchants.
